Designation places company among the elite IT programs in the world

CIO magazine has named Enlyte to its prestigious CIO 100 Award list for 2023. For more than 30 years, the CIO 100 Awards have recognized innovative organizations around the world that exemplify the highest level of strategic and operational excellence in information technology.

Enlyte was honored for its efforts in using IT in innovative ways to deliver business value to customers. This includes optimizing business processes, enabling growth and creating competitive advantages.

“This year’s class of award winners have distinguished themselves with many groundbreaking projects using AI, quantum computing, facial recognition, analytics and more,” said Anne McCrory, chair of the 2023 CIO awards programs. “Their innovations improve customer experiences, track sustainability and reduce risk, and have novel applications across industries, from pharma and health care to manufacturing, retail, software and more.”

The CIO 100 designation places Enlyte among leading companies recognized for IT enterprise excellence, including several Fortune 500 companies. Enlyte and other winning companies will be recognized at the CIO 100 Symposium & Awards in August. This year’s symposium theme, “Destination: Excellence,” will be centered around the 2023 award winners, who will share stories of leadership and innovations as well as experiences with the latest technologies including generative AI, automation and quantum.
