Workers' Comp

Reliable Transportation Means Better Injured Employee Outcomes

September 13, 2021
1 MIN READ

For many of us, finding a ride is easier than ever. Services like Uber and Lyft have made it simple to summon transportation with a few taps to our phones. But for injured workers, getting from one place to another often remains daunting.

Those who are recovering from a workplace injury might face difficulty getting around for a brief recovery window or perhaps for much longer. Without timely and reliable transportation, those in need of medical care can miss appointments. This can jeopardize the pace of their recoveries and add up to poorer health outcomes.

That’s why it’s essential for injured workers to have access to a network of safe and effective reliable transportation options.

Learn more about how reliable transportation can improve the outcomes for injured workers!

©2022 Enlyte Group, LLC.